Serving St. Louis journalism teachers and students

We are an association of high school journalism advisers who meet for mutual support and to help improve scholastic journalism in the St. Louis area. We meet monthly at various schools and restaurants. We sponsor an annual student journalism conference and provide summer workshop scholarships for both students and advisers. We welcome all publication teachers and offer mentoring for advisers. This year we look forward to sharing lesson plans and our own expertise. Please join us.

Why Join SSP?

Member benefits

advisers

- SSP members meet monthly for a dinner meeting so advisers can plan events, socialize, share ideas, exchange curricular materials.
- SSP members receive a membership directory, which includes a list of other advisers in the area.
- SSP members are part of a network of other publications advisers who understand the challenges and rewards of publications work.
- New advisers may request that SSP provide a mentor teacher who will work with them during the year.
- SSP members are eligible for scholarship money for summer workshops/programs through the H.L. Hall Yearbook and Bruce Schneider Newspaper Scholarship Programs.

- SSP sponsors mail-in contests for student work which allows member schools to compete on a local level. There are overall categories where publications receive an evaluation provided by outside judges and ratings of Superior, Excellent or Merit.
- SSP member-school students will be eligible to earn scholarship money for summer workshops through the Curtis Kenner Memorial Scholarship Program.

SSP Conference, March 7, 2011

- Brings in journalism specialists in the areas of print, broadcast and online journalism to share information with students.
- Features awards for contests.
